FOR HEALTH AND WELLNESS BUSINESS OWNERS

THE FULL CALENDAR PLAYBOOK

8 leaks between the first inquiry and a full calendar, and how to close each one.

Most health and wellness businesses think they have a lead problem. Usually they have a leak problem.

Someone weighing a five figure treatment researches for months. Someone booking a first massage compares three studios in ten minutes. Someone curious about Reiki wants to know what it feels like first. Every gap between their question and your answer is a chance to lose them.

This playbook covers the 8 leaks we see most, whether you run a cash pay medical practice, a massage studio, a hyperbaric center or a healing practice. None of them need a bigger ad budget. All of them need a system.

08 Tracking Leads Instead of Clients

01

SLOW FIRST RESPONSE

WHAT HAPPENS NOW

An inquiry comes in at 8:40 PM. Someone calls back the next afternoon. By then the person has filled out two other forms and booked with whoever answered first.

THE FIX

1. Answer every new inquiry with an automatic text within 60 seconds, in a human voice, with a question they can reply to.
2. Route the inquiry to a named person, with a call task due inside business hours.
3. Track first response time per person, every week.

> WHAT TO MEASURE
>
> Median minutes from form submit to first human contact.

02

ONE CHANNEL FOLLOW-UP

WHAT HAPPENS NOW

The front desk calls twice, gets voicemail, and marks the lead cold. Many people screen unknown numbers and would have answered a text or an email.

THE FIX

1. Run every lead on three channels: call, text and email, on a set schedule.
2. Leave a short voicemail that gives one reason to call back.
3. Stop the sequence the moment they reply, so it never feels like a robot.

> WHAT TO MEASURE
>
> Contact rate: percent of new leads you actually speak with.

03

NO SHOWS ON THE CALENDAR

WHAT HAPPENS NOW

The appointment is booked, the time is blocked, and the client never shows. Nobody reminded them, and nobody followed up after.

THE FIX

1. Send a confirmation right away, a reminder the day before and one an hour before.
2. Include the who, the when, the where and what to bring in every reminder. No digging.
3. Text or call every no show within the hour and offer two new times.

> WHAT TO MEASURE
>
> Show rate: appointments attended divided by appointments booked.

04

PRICE BEFORE VALUE

WHAT HAPPENS NOW

The first question is "How much is it?" and the answer is a number. Without context, any price for a premium service sounds high, whether it is a five figure treatment or a 90 minute session.

THE FIX

1. Ask about their goals, their history and what they have tried before you talk price.
2. Explain what the session or treatment includes, step by step, before the investment.
3. Put packages, memberships or financing next to the single price, so the better option is easy to say yes to.

>
> Inquiry to booking rate, split by who answered the call.

05

ONE VISIT, THEN GONE

WHAT HAPPENS NOW

A new client loves the first visit and never comes back. Nobody asked them to rebook, and two months later they forgot your name.

THE FIX

1. Offer the next appointment before they leave, at checkout or at the end of the session.
2. Send a rebooking text a few days after every first visit.
3. Reach out to anyone you have not seen in 90 days with a real reason to come back.

> WHAT TO MEASURE
>
> Rebooking rate: first time clients who book a second visit within 60 days.

06

NO PLAN FOR THE LONG DECISION

WHAT HAPPENS NOW

Plenty of serious buyers take weeks or months to decide, especially on bigger commitments like a treatment plan, a package or a retreat. After two weeks of silence, most businesses stop talking to them.

THE FIX

1. Build a 12 month nurture: one useful email or video every week or two, never a hard sell.
2. Mix education, client stories told within the rules, and answers to common questions.
3. Re-engage your old leads list every quarter with something new to say.

> WHAT TO MEASURE
>
> Bookings from leads older than 90 days.

07

PROOF COLLECTED AT THE WRONG TIME

WHAT HAPPENS NOW

Reviews and stories get requested months later, or never. The client who was thrilled after their third visit is busy by month six.

THE FIX

1. Ask for a review at the moment a client tells you they loved it.
2. Make it one tap: a text with a direct link to the review page.
3. Get written consent before you share any client story, every time.

> WHAT TO MEASURE
>
> New reviews per month, and your average rating.

08

TRACKING LEADS INSTEAD OF CLIENTS

WHAT HAPPENS NOW

The marketing report says 300 leads. The front desk says they were junk. Nobody can say which channel produced clients who actually paid.

THE FIX

1. Tag every inquiry with its source the moment it arrives.
2. Carry that tag through booking, visit and payment.
3. Judge every channel on cost per booked client, not cost per lead.

> WHAT TO MEASURE
>
> Cost per booked client, by channel, every month.
